Thank you for your enquiry.

For an EASA Class 1 Initial Medical, you will be required to undergo a psychological assessment, which can be completed either face-to-face or online. This assessment may be completed before or after your appointment with us; however, it must be completed before your EASA medical certificate can be issued.

As Centreline operates under Austro Control, this psychological assessment is a mandatory requirement and forms part of the standard procedure for obtaining an initial EASA Class 1 Medical Certificate.

Please also note that if you have applied for an EASA Class 1 Medical, each EU Member State's aviation authority has its own specific regulations, procedures, and processing timeframes for medical applications. As your medical certification is administered through Austro Control, Austrian requirements and procedures will apply.

You are welcome to complete the psychological assessment with any qualified psychologist. However, we have included the contact details of psychologists we regularly work with who are familiar with Aviation Medicine requirements. Please contact the consultants directly regarding availability and fees. Please note that any costs associated with the assessment, additional testing, or consultations are the applicant's responsibility.
